

Philosophy 543: *Topics in Philosophy of Art

Ned Markosian
Department of Philosophy
University of Massachusetts – Amherst
markosian@umass.edu
Fall 2020

This class will be conducted online, mostly synchronously. The class meetings will be on Zoom, at the regularly scheduled time for the class. These Zoom meetings will also be recorded and made available upon request to students in the class, for those who are for whatever reason unable to attend in real time. (The recordings will come with transcripts produced by Zoom's software. These are imperfect, but still useful for some purposes.) My office hours will also take place on Zoom. In addition to these meetings there will be an asynchronous discussion forum for the class.

Class Meetings: Wednesday 12:20pm-2:50pm.

My Office Hours: Tuesday 2:00pm-3:00pm, Thursday 1:00pm-2:00pm.

Course Overview

This course will examine a number of philosophical questions about art, including the following.

- What is art? How should we distinguish between works of art and things that are not works of art?
- What is art for? Why does it play such an outsized role in our cultures, our thinking, and our lives?
- At first glance, it appears that some works of art (paintings, for example, and sculptures) are concrete physical objects, while other works of art (novels and musical compositions, for example) are abstract types of some kind (a series of sentence types, in the case of a novel, and a type of sound sequence, in the case of a musical composition). Is this initial impression accurate? Are works of art in the different genres instances of radically different ontological categories? And if so, does it follow that some works of art are created while others are discovered?

- Speaking of ontology, what exactly are movies? Are they filmstrips, repeatable filmstrip types, digital files, abstract objects of some kind, or something else? Are the artists who make movies the directors, entire teams consisting of (typically) hundreds of movie-makers, or some other group of people?
- How broad should our conception of art be – should it include such non-mainstream genres as graffiti, tattoos, street art, television commercials and other advertisements, automotive art, gardens, architecture, etc.?
- Assuming the answer in most of the above cases is Yes, are there special issues that arise in connection with genres such as tattoo art and some of the others? Among these questions might be ethical and ownership questions about tattoos arising from the unusual arrangement of having a work of art on a living body (which is, in most cases, not the body of the artist responsible for the work).
- Works of fiction often cause deep emotional responses, even among people who know that the stories and characters contained in them are fictional. How is that possible?
- Similarly, musical works, including works that contain no lyrics or narrative themes, often cause deep emotional responses, despite being, on their surfaces anyway, not really about anything. How is that possible?
- Is aesthetic value a real thing? Are some things intrinsically beautiful, in a way that is independent of being observed? What about artistic value? Is that a real thing, and if so, does it differ from aesthetic value?
- What are fictions, and how (if at all) do they differ from novels and short stories?
- What about fictional characters? What exactly are they? Are they created by their authors, or are they discovered?

Learning Outcomes

After successfully completing this course, students will be able to:

- Characterize some of the main issues in The Philosophy of Art.
- Articulate and defend their own views on these main issues in The Philosophy of Art.
- Prepare a high-quality handout for a presentation, and give a professional, conference-style presentation.
- Write a proper academic term paper.
- Finally have answers to a number of questions about art that have bugged them for years. (And probably also become aware of some new questions that did not previously bug them...)

Course Requirements

- ❖ Three presentations (two standard presentations on reading assignments, one presentation on some work of art; collectively worth 30% of final grade)
- ❖ Seven weekly papers (collectively worth 30% of final grade)
- ❖ One term paper (worth 40% of final grade)

Academic Honesty

We will follow UMass's policy on academic honesty. Please consult this web page for all the details regarding this policy.

Required Readings

- Abell, Catharine, "Art: What it Is and Why it Matters," Philosophy and Phenomenological Research 85 (2011), pp. 671-691.
- Dodd, Julian, "Musical Works as Eternal Types," The British Journal of Aesthetics 40 (2000), pp. 424-440.
- Eaton, Marcia Muelder, "Art and the Aesthetic," in Peter Kivy (ed.) The Blackwell Guide to Aesthetics (Blackwell, 2004).
- Gaut, Berys, "The Philosophy of the Movies: Cinematic Narration," in Peter Kivy (ed.) The Blackwell Guide to Aesthetics (Blackwell, 2004).
- Robinson, Jenefer, "The Emotions in Art," in Peter Kivy (ed.) The Blackwell Guide to Aesthetics (Blackwell, 2004).
- Saito, Yuriko, Everyday Aesthetics (Oxford University Press, 2007).
- Sizer, Laura, "The Art of Tattoos," The British Journal of Aesthetics (forthcoming).
- Thomasson, Amie, Fiction and Metaphysics (Cambridge University Press, 2008).

About Presentations

Each of your presentations on a reading assignment should be about 10 minutes long, and should feature a 1-page handout. You are not expected to summarize the reading. Instead, you should select one main point or argument from the reading (ideally this will be one of the two or three most important things in the reading), and present your own response to that point or argument. (You will have to coordinate with whoever else is presenting on the same day to avoid overlap with respect to the content of your presentations.) After your presentation you will conduct a 5-10-minute Q&A session.

For your presentation on a work of art, you will choose some interesting work of art that you would like to share with the class. (Depending on the genre, we will find some way to facilitate the sharing over Zoom. If all else fails, we can always fall back on having you give a description of the work.) You will use this work to illustrate some idea, point, question, or argument, and your presentation should be about 10 minutes long. After your presentation you will conduct a 5-10-minute Q&A session.

Our schedule for presentations will be worked out on the first day of class.

About Weekly Papers

For each day when there is a reading assignment and you are not giving a presentation, you will be required to turn in a weekly paper on that day's reading assignment. A weekly paper is a 2- or 3-page paper in which you (i) summarize the main content of the reading assignment, (ii) raise some substantive question or questions about that content, and (iii) articulate your own solution to the main philosophical problem addressed in the reading.

Your lowest weekly paper grade will be dropped, and the remaining seven grades will be averaged to determine your overall weekly paper grade.

Weekly papers are due at 10am on the day of a given reading assignment, and must be submitted using Turnitin on Moodle. Late papers will be penalized 10 points (out of 100) per day. Extensions may be granted, but only to students who email me ahead of time.

About Term Papers

Your term paper must be on an approved topic, and should be approximately 8-12 pages long. It must be submitted using Turnitin on Moodle. Late papers will be penalized at the rate of one letter grade per day, but extensions are available to those who email me ahead of time.

A Word About Discussions

Philosophical discussions (whether in class, after a talk, or in informal settings) can vary along a number of different dimensions. One of these is a spectrum that ranges from (a) a competitive, zero-sum game that involves scoring points and trying to appear smart, on one end, to (b) a cooperative and fun activity aimed at discovering and solving interesting philosophical problems, on the other end. In general, the closer a discussion is to the cooperative end of this spectrum, the better it will be – better because it produces better philosophy, and better also because it is more enjoyable for everyone involved.

Here are some rules designed to keep us on the right end of this spectrum.

1. Don't be mean.
2. Never interrupt. If you have a great point, it will still be a great point when it is your turn to speak.
3. Don't bogart the discussion. Some people are more shy than you. Many of them have excellent things to say. It pays to listen.
4. Think in terms of abstract ideas that, once expressed, are on their own, rather than ideas that belong to a particular person.
5. Think of your job as trying to develop those ideas, making them clearer, stronger, better.
6. Try to build on points that have been made by others, whenever possible.
7. Try to make connections between the point currently under consideration and previous points.
8. Every once in a while during the discussion, someone should offer a big-picture comment (even if it is just a question). "So it seems to me that we were discussing X and Y. Did we ever come to any conclusion about whether Y is consistent with X?"
9. If you notice someone breaking one of the first two rules, speak up right away, even if – especially if – you are not the victim.
